Project Penguin Gets Set to Go-live!

In an effort to make the difference to our environment that we feel so strongly about, SanLamere has committed itself to donate £1 from every sale made to a penguin research or conservation project every year. In 2008 SanLamere are proud to announce that they have now offered the Australian Antarctic Division (AAD) their full support.

SanLamere intends to run an up-to-date AAD Penguin blog on their website that will allow the public to get inside a real Antarctic mission and to experience the day-to-day trials not only of the penguins on site, but of the brave individuals working to make a difference in one of the world's least hospitable places.

SanLamere will be offering the blog totally free but will also be working to raise additional funds for penguin research through a series of events in 2008. Keep checking in to www.sanlamere.com for further details!
